treatment programmes for psychiatric disorders

Treatment programmes for psychiatric disorders are based on cognitive-behavioural principles, and are designed to provide comprehensive and holistic treatment in order to facilitate recovery in people affected by:

- mood and anxiety disorders (i.e. depression, phobias, post traumatic stress and panic disorders);
- personality disorders (i.e. avoidance and dependence disorders); or
- psychotic disorders (i.e. schizophrenia and delusional disorders).

addiction treatment programme

Our mental healthcare programmes also include a treatment programme to assist users whose functioning has become further impaired either as a result of their dependency on psychoactive substances or any other addiction associated with their mental disorder.

This intervention programme is aimed at breaking the cycle of addiction through detoxifying the user whilst implementing an intensive cognitive behavioural psychotherapy programme. The primary goal is to interrupt the cycle of addiction and to foster maintenance of abstinence. This programme, supported by 24 hour specialised nursing care, includes the following:

- Medical treatment.
- Occupational (group and individual) psychotherapy.
- Facilitating family support.
